Nutrition Labels Can Help You Make Healthier Food Choices

Virtually every food and beverage package includes a Nutrition Facts label with important information about the product inside. Understanding what that information means can help you make better choices for a healthier lifestyle.

- Serving Size

The label tells you how many total servings are in the package AND how much of that should go into a single serving. All nutrition information on the label is based on one serving at the recommended size.

- Number of Calories

The calories listed are for one serving only. Calories represent energy in food; so if you eat or drink more calories than you burn in a day, you will gain weight.

- % Daily Value

Use this section to choose foods that are high in the nutrients you should get more of, and low in the nutrients you should get less of. Your nutritional needs will depend on how physically active you are, so ask your doctor what calorie level is right for you.

- Get More of These

Americans often don't get enough dietary fiber, vitamin A, vitamin C, calcium and potassium in their diets. These are essential to keeping you strong and healthy, and may help reduce the risk of some diseases.

- Get Less of These

Eating too much total fat (especially saturated fat and trans fat), cholesterol or sodium may increase your risk of heart disease, cancer or high blood pressure. Try to limit these as much as possible.
